Pig Boat

At sea on a submarine isn't exactly the "life of Riley." In the Battle of the Atlantic, or on the great stretches of the Pacific these sailors know the hazards of their work

One of the spots aboard these "Pig Boats" that all crew members enjoy is the galley, or kitchen. Space limitations prevent an elaborate setup, but cooks aboard these vessels are justly proud of the meals they prepare for their crews. Your increased purchase of War Bonds helps make submarine life as pleasant as possible.

Reich Terrified By War Prisoners

Spreading Revolts Serious Problem for Nazis.

WASHINGTON. — Spreading revolts among the six million war prisoners and conscripted foreign laborers now in Germany are creating a serious problem for the Nazis on the home front, it was revealed in high diplomatic quarters.

Hunger and hatred of their Nazi captors have driven the escaped foreigners to desperate measures not only to sustain themselves but to attack German home morale.

Thousands of prisoners and workers have escaped and now prey on German citizens and in some cases terrorize whole towns, these sources said.

Information leaking out of Germany shows that the problem is especially acute during Allied bombings of industrial cities, when the escaped prisoners emerge from their hiding places and add to the general confusion.

The regular police have been unable to control the situation. Citizens have attempted to protect themselves by organizing civilian guards to patrol secluded highways and to come to the rescue of waylaid countrymen.

The French are reported to be taking the leadership in organizing the escaped prisoners into bands capable of doing greater damage than could be accomplished by individual efforts. There are approximately 1,700,000 French prisoners of war in Germany, held there since the fall of France in 1940.

In addition there are 30,000 or 40,000 Danes, a large number of Poles and Italians, an unknown number of Russians and some Belgians.

Federal Employees Rose 73 Per Cent in 1942

WASHINGTON—The number of civilian employees in the Executive branch of the federal government rose during 1942 from 1,620,000 to 2,810,900, a net increase of 73 per cent, and the federal payroll went from $247,207,409 to $470,334,353, an increase of 90 per cent during the 12-month period.

War agencies and departments have about 1,584,600, nearly 2½ times the total on their rolls in December, 1941, according to the Civil Service commission. These agencies now constitute about 71 per cent of the federal service, and more than 93 per cent of last year's growth in federal employment is directly attributable to three of them, the war department, navy department and Office of Emergency Management.

Civilian employees in Washington numbered 284,100 at the end of December, as against 207,200 in December, 1941.

Outside of Washington, civilian employment increased by 70,900 from November to December, aggregating 2,526,800 employees at the end of the month, as compared with 1,413,700 in December, 1941.

Tons of Maps Are Needed in Warfare

Play an Important Role in Military Planning.

ST. LOUIS.—Modern warfare's entry into the three dimensional phase has made the map more important than ever before as an aid to strategists, field commanders, navigators and even the doughboy in foreign lands.

That is why the map service branch of the army engineer corps has grown from a skeleton force, making a comparatively few maps, to a huge organization producing tons and tons of maps.

In charge of the St. Louis office is Lieut. Andrew McNally, who explains the functions of the map-making service.

"Maps play an important role in all military planning," he explained. "All, from the commander in chief on down—chiefs of operations, commanders in the field and so on—must have maps before them all the time.

"The maps range from over-all maps used in broad strategy down to detailed maps of a small area, showing every tree, house, abandoned well, wooded area and so forth. The location of a house, for instance, might be highly important in a Con mando-type raid," McNally said.

"A bomber going on a raid would not want to be switching maps every few miles; a map is needed to cover the entire flight. Mechanized troops must have maps of larger areas, too, because they cover more territory than do foot soldiers," McNally said.

Aerial photographs, land surveys and maps collected by military attaches of the diplomatic service all enter into the making of a complete document for use in some armed operation.

Long Shunned Sea Urchins Are Now in Big Demand

BOOTHBAY HARBOR, MAINE.—Sea urchins may rate on some menus but the majority of Maine fishermen who catch the pin-cushioned creatures haven't even tasted them.

The sudden popularity of the fish that looks like a prickly chestnut puzzles them. They remember the time when bathers screamed when they stepped on them and avoided them along the coast.

Now commission merchants in New York offer them a cent a pound and sometimes as high as $1.50 a bushel for the heretofore shunned fish.

Catching them is easy, for some sections of the coastline are so infested with sea urchins that they can be shoveled into dories.

However, only one Boothbay fisherman admits that he ever tasted one and he tried it raw. Although he didn't like the taste of the orange-colored flesh, he and his co-workers are willing to keep scooping them up so long as there is a market for them.

But they wish someone would tell them who buys sea urchins and exactly what they taste like.

Canadian-Alaskan Road Takes Supplies to Reds

CHICAGO.—Lend-lease supplies now are reaching Russia via the 1,800-mile Canadian Alaskan highway and Russian women have been stationed in Alaska to service planes destined for the Soviets.

This was the report recently of Harold W. Richardson, western editor of the Engineering News-Record, who recently drove up the highway in an army jeep.

The editor termed the highway one of the most important developments of the war and predicted it would serve for both offense and defense against Japan.

Navy Gunner's Direct Hit On Torpedo Saves Ship

LONDON.—Firing at an oncoming torpedo, hitting and exploding it before it reached its mark, one gunner saved his ship when it was attacked while in a convoy bound for Russia, it was disclosed. The feat was mentioned in an official account of the activities of 7,000 navy gunners perpetually on the seas with merchant ships.

New Type of Warship Is In Action for British

LONDON.—Britain has put into action a new type warship, A. V. Alexander, first lord of the admiralty, revealed in the house of commons.

He described it as faster and heavier than the corvette type.

"We propose to call it the frigate," he added.

(Corvettes generally displace between 500 and 600 tons.)

Coppers' Faces Red As They Report Theft

TOLEDO. — Patrolmen Raymond Malicki and Edward Jankowski sheepishly reported to their superior officers that their scout car was stolen from right under their noses.

They said they followed a prowler and returned to the car to find it had been stolen. Two other patrolmen later recovered the car.

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...

"How about joinin' us in a game, Judge?... I'll drop out for a while."

"Sorry, Phil, but I can't today...I'm on my way up to the hospital to see how Frank's wife is coming along. I just dropped by to give you the answer to that question you asked me about synthetic rubber yesterday in the barber shop. I looked it up and found out that the beverage distilling industry's facilities for producing grain alcohol make it possible to include 200,000 tons of rubber from grain in the government's 870,000 ton synthetic rubber program.

"I also verified the fact that no distiller is making whiskey today. They all stopped making whiskey last year and are working night and day, 7 days a week, producing war alcohol for the government...for smokeless powder, chemical warfare materials, medical supplies, as well as for synthetic rubber. It's a mighty good thing these distilleries were in existence ready to do this important job."
